ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

metro editor, Dominic Fracassa, for unflinchingly freeing me up to write and research this book at the times I needed. I also thank fellow Chronster and author John King for commiserating with and advising me on the travails of punching out dailies while simultaneously grinding out a manuscript.

There are many invaluable sources whose work to help homeless people has helped me understand the crisis as a reporter, and these have shone particularly brightly for me: Steve Adami, Sherilyn Adams, Art Agnos, Jason Albertson, Angela Alioto, Josh Bamberger, Michael Blecker, Paul Boden, Emily Cohen, Dennis Culhane, Sam Dodge, Bevan Dufty, Kristie Fairchild, Jennifer Friedenbach, Gail Gilman, Roberta Goodman, Laura Guzman, Sally Hindman, Dariush Kayhan, Jeff Kositsky, Margot Kushel, Jennifer Loving, Philip Mangano, Gary McCoy, Tomiquia Moss, David Nakanishi, Gavin Newsom, Rann Parker, Michael Pritchard, Sam Quinones, Trent Rhorer, Nan Roman, Del Seymour, Randy Shaw, Darrell Steinberg, Alex Tourk, Joe Wilson, and Barry Zevin.

And finally but not lastly, there are my wife, Carolyn, and our daughter, Molly, the joy of our lives. Both have been infinitely patient and understanding about the long hours, the frustrations, the many times away from home. But more than that, they have brought expertise to this project: Carolyn, a crack editor and reporter, with her sharp eyes on the manuscript, and therapist Molly as a steady, reassuring voice when things got shaky. My everlasting love and gratitude to you both.
